

Harriet Tubman c. 1820-1913

Harriet Tubman is a force to be reckoned with...
Sister Harriet. Comrade Tubman.

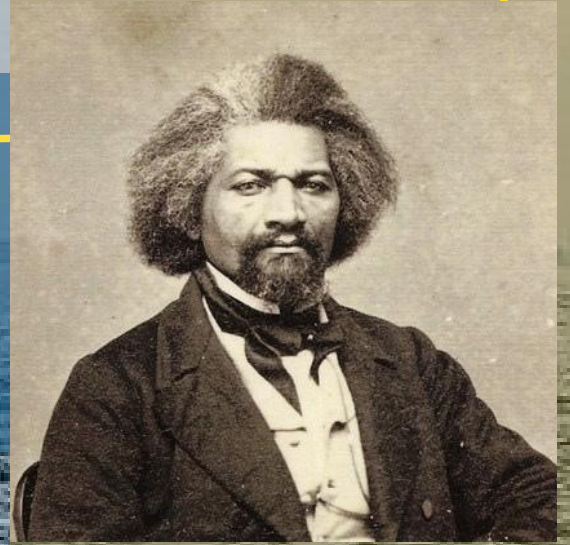

To this day, her name rings with a vigor that carries the lives, hopes, dreams, and freedom of countless people. Harriet Tubman "never lost a single passenger," as she so rightfully states. She put her freedom and life on the line nineteen (19) times! Over the course of a decade.

Her power, her courage, and her relentless strive for liberation has touched far more people than she physically guided to freedom. Like the North Star, Harriet Tubman, still is, an unshakable beacon of light, a wise spirit, and a Warrior that wages on.

We #SayHerName in resonance of the deepest humanity in us all.

Frederick Douglass reminds us that our words are power. To say his name is to declare that Black people are 100% human. Frederick Douglass urges each one of us to resist any force that devalues our lives to commodities.

Frederick Douglass risked his life learning how to read and write. He risked his life the first time he attempted to escape enslavement. He risked his life the second time he attempted and achieved personal freedom. But a safe life in silence was not an option for Douglass. He continued to risk his life with each paper he published and each word he spoke because he knew that his individual freedom meant nothing in the face of his community's violent bondage.

As in the case of any revolution, there were many people, of all races, who fought for us to inherit a more just world. We honor all of the unsung freedom fighters, abolitionists, supporters who contributed to make the Underground Railroad successful.
